SUBMISSION PROCESS AND DEADLINE

OCTOBER 15, 2019

All proposals (200 words) should provide an abstract or description of your presentation and be accompanied by a brief statement of relevant experience in relation to your proposal or a short CV and be submitted to the Organizing Committee. Your proposal should be sent to papers@nafc.ca by October 15, 2019. Travel support for community scholars and students will be available. Decisions on proposals will be communicated by the end of October 2019.

FOR THE SEVENTH GENERATION IMAGINING AND CREATING INDIGENOUS FUTURES

This conference is in celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Indigenous Studies at Trent University and the twentieth anniversary of the Indigenous Studies PhD program at Trent and a showcase for the work of the Urban Aboriginal Knowledge Network. It's a time of reflection upon where we've been, where we are and where we're going as Indigenous peoples.

The conference organizers seek original works examining the themes of Imagining and Creating Indigenous Futures, particularly in urban spaces including community driven research, health and well-being, community development, youth and child development, urban indigenous identities, histories, ethics, governance, language and culture, justice, and education. Other topics or themes will be considered. The organizing committee invites scholars and community members to submit proposals, for: individual papers, panel sessions, posters, roundtables, workshops, film screenings, and performances.
